

Rescheduled Practice Reply

COMMUNICATION · FIX THE MESSAGE

Delia opens the team group text and lands below the pinned practice update. The coach moved practice from the turf field to the auxiliary gym. The pinned note says to reply after checking the equipment pickup list. Delia sent “Got it” first, then noticed her name beside the ball bag. Now the group cannot tell whether she is coming or bringing equipment. Her message also skipped the west doors and the pickup time.

Rewrite Delia's message so the group knows the checked details and the remaining plan.

Got it, I can do it.

Missing: whether Delia checked the pinned update before replying; whether Delia is attending the rescheduled practice; whether Delia will bring the ball bag; the new location, pickup place, and pickup time

Example: I checked the pinned note. I can come to the auxiliary gym and bring the ball bag from the storage cart at 3:35 by the west doors.

Responses will vary. Accept any answer the student can give a practical reason for.

Think about it: What changes when a reply shows which information was checked first?

TEACHER NOTE

Responses will vary. A strong rewrite states that Delia checked the pinned update, confirms attendance, names the ball bag, and includes the pickup place and time. Other clear versions are acceptable if they give the group enough information to act on.
