

Practice Time Change

WORK HABITS · WHAT'S MISSING

Jamie taps open the team group text and finds forty new messages under a pinned practice update. The coach moved practice from the main gym to the back lot after maintenance closed the floor. Most players replied quickly, then started arguing about which cones were missing. Jamie notices the absent teammate is still reacting to yesterday's plan in an older thread. If nobody fixes it, one player will head to the wrong entrance after school. Jamie drafts a simple process for checking the change and telling the missing person.

> Name the missing step in Jamie's process.

1. Read the newest pinned practice update and note the changed place and start time.
2. Send the absent teammate one clear message with the new details.
3. Reply in the group text that the message was sent, so nobody sends mixed information.

> Answer: Check which teammate is still using the old plan or has not replied to the update. (goes after step 1)

Think about it: What would likely go wrong if Jamie skipped the check before sending the message?

TEACHER NOTE

The missing step is to check which teammate has not seen or replied to the new plan before sending the update. Without that step, Jamie might message the wrong person or leave the uninformed person out. A strong response should name the need to identify the person who missed the change, not simply repeat the new practice details.
